KEY TO EUROPE AGAIN LAID IN THE HANDS OF HITLER

Berlin Now Studies Possible Deal With Great Britain

IN AFRICAN PROBLEM

Berlin Also Considers The Possibility of Returning to League Membership

By H. R. Knickerbocker
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1935)

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 30.—Recent months again have laid the key to Europe in the hands of Chancellor Hitler, of Germany. Berlin, taking advantage of African developments now is studying a deal with Great Britain by which she would agree to take part in sanctions against Italy, I. N. S. was reliably informed today.

The price for Germany's taking sides against Italy would be the return of Tanganyika, African territory taken from Germany after the war, by Britain.

Berlin is studying the possibility, it was learned, of returning to membership in the League of Nations in the course of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute, if properly compensated.

Against this prospect lays the possible thrust, it was pointed out here, that Premier Mussolini in praise of Hitler that Austria and perhaps South Tyrol, "quotes the author," is the withdrawal of the strong offensive Italy has shown in the past to all Germany in this direction.

Thus Hitler is in a position to play on this side in the East African game.

Consolidated Firemen

Enjoy Social Program

A social night was enjoyed by the members of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Company, last night, when a large number assembled in the meeting room and witnessed a program given by professional talent.

Dolly Davis was mistress of ceremonies and performed in her usual exceptional way. She also gave a number of songs and dances. Then there were the Gray twins, dancers; Eddie Bloom, xylophone; Dot Landy, songs.

Following the entertainment there were refreshments served.

At the business meeting, officers were nominated for the ensuing year.

Ukrainians To Give First Program, Ballet Dancers

Among the dances which will be included in the program to be given by the Ukrainian Ballet Dancers at St. Mark's School Auditorium, Friday evening, November 8th, will be "Kolomeya," a characteristic dance known throughout Ukraine and danced by the dwellers of the Carpathian Mountains. Another, danced by the highlanders, is known as "Arkan" and will be by the men alone.

"Katherine from the Kherson," originated on the vast steppes of Ukraine, and resembles the winds that move the grasses of the Ukrainian steppes. The setting of the meadows where Easter bells are ringing is the background for "Hayevka," a festival dance which uses some of the rituals of the old sun-god worship.

A little girl's solo number will be a "Hutuzotchee," a dance of the Highlanders. Typical folk songs of the Ukrainian peasant at work or at play will be sung by the Bandurist Chorus of Bristol and Trenton. The ballet dancers of Bristol and Trenton are to be presented by the ballet master, Vasil Ovrannenko, of New York City, and his assistant, Nicolas Arseny, teacher of Bristol.

Republican Candidate For Re-Election To BOROUGH COUNCIL

A native of Bristol, Richard T. Myers, 145 Otter street, is a candidate on the Republican ticket for re-election on November 5th, to borough council from the third ward. Mr. Myers was born in Bristol on Beaver Dam Road, December 2, 1876, and was the son of the late John B. and Annie Trudgen Myers. He was educated in the Bristol public schools, and on October 17, 1900, married Meta Worthington.

Mr. Myers has resided in Bristol all his life with the exception of four years, when he was in the west, being employed as a locomotive machinist. Upon his return to Bristol, Mr. Myers was employed in the Baltimore and Ohio, and the P. R. R. shops in Philadelphia.

In 1901, Mr. Myers entered in the grocery business here, which he continued for 10 years. He then established himself in the automobile business at his present address.

My Myers served, a number of years ago, as a school director in Bristol, and then eight years ago was elected to borough council. He is chairman of the public works committee and is also a member of the police committee and takes a deep interest in the affairs of his native town, and the third ward, of which he has been a resident for many years.

Mr. and Mrs. Myers are the parents of four children, Lewis who is employed as display manager in a large store in Philadelphia; Mrs. Ernest Lawrence, Lansdowne; Richard T. Jr., an electrical engineer; and Alethia, who is a senior at West Chester Teachers College.

Mr. Myers' hobby is experimenting with machinery. He is a candidate for re-election on Tuesday, November 5th, on a record of intelligent and faithful service.

POLICE WARN AGAINST DAMAGING PROPERTY

Chief Jones Says Arrests Will Be Made and Those Guilty Prosecuted

OFFICERS INSTRUCTED

Tonight is what is known as mischief night and during the past two years hoodlums have taken advantage of this occasion to damage property and to cause much annoyance to others.

Today Chief of Police Linford J. Jones issued a warning that the property of others must not be damaged just because it is a time for fun and merry making.

"For the past two years," Chief Jones stated, "hoodlums have marked automobiles with grease and paint; broken windows, carried away fences and portions of buildings. The police do not intend to put up with this any longer and I am now warning all, that if any are caught doing such pranks, that arrests will be made and they will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law."

The police officers have been instructed by Chief Jones to watch for those who are bent upon this sort of mischief and to make arrests.

Too often mischief tolerated at the Halloween period becomes malicious and embraces sheer vandalism. Turning in false fire alarms, removal of screens, gates and other property from occupied as well as unoccupied residences, strewing tacks about the streets, letting air out of tires and marking windows of automobiles and houses are a few examples of this sort of malicious mischief.

CLUB MEETS

The Misses Clara and Clemantina Ciabellini, 1100 Pond street, entertained the members of the Kit Kat Klub, Saturday evening. The evening was spent sewing, and playing games. Refreshments were served.

BRISTOL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION MARKS HALF CENTURY OF ACTIVITY; BANQUETS ON 50TH ANNIVERSARY; SPURRED TO GREATER EFFORT

The Rev. Samuel Jackson, New Hope, and Mrs. Lucy A. Harper, County W. C. T. U. President, Are Speakers—100 Enjoy Excellent Menu, and Varied Program

With 50 years of activity behind it, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Bristol paused last evening to celebrate the golden anniversary, reviewed the progress and set-backs of the last half century, and resolved to put its all into the fight that is before.

With the voiced desire of the first speaker, the Rev. Samuel Jackson, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of New Hope, "God give us a passion to go out and do the will of God," the members and friends of the union were spurred on to greater effort. The needs and desires of the hour, as ably expressed by this speaker, are a vision and a passion—"They are within our grasp if only we will take them. We can get them by prayer."

The president of the Bristol union, Mrs. Harry H. Headley, served as toastmistress, and during the course of the evening introduced two charter members of the celebrating union who were in attendance—Miss Martha C. Hughes and Mrs. Mary Hillborn. The former was garbed in a dress she wore 50 years ago. Three other charter members who remain, Miss Sarah Taylor, Germantown; Mrs. Sarah Manger, Washington, D. C.; and Mrs. Arthur Leaf, Texas, were unable to be present.

The program of the evening, in addition to the address of the Rev. Jackson, included a talk by the president of the Bucks County W. C. T. U., Mrs. Lucy A. Harper, Yardley; a review of the past 50 years by Miss Hughes, with several members of Bristol union participating; and vocal and instrumental numbers.

In her welcoming remarks, Mrs. Headley stated that 50 years is a long period to carry on "especially when you meet with the opposition that the W. C. T. U. has. But the union has remained loyal to its ideals and principles." Voicing appreciation of the support of the clergy, Mrs. Headley presented the Rev. Jackson to the assembly.

"I wish you to go out, not discouraged, but filled with the spirit of victory, conscious that you are not losing, but winning," the speaker told the 100 who had gathered around the banquet table. "I take off my hat to you, for you have won. You ask about conditions today? Well, this is just a set-back. The enemy has just won a skirmish, and the enemy is worried. He's afraid he'll lose out, and please God he will lose out." Quoting a verse from the 150th Psalm "Praise God with the sound of a trumpet," the clergyman used this as his theme. "We need to blow a 'Forward, March,' and get busy. We know booze is back again." He then scored those of advanced years who are trying to retrace the yesterdays, and by their actions are setting back the nation.

"This is a day when we've got to meet the enemy with every ounce of energy we've got," he continued. "Women of the W. C. T. U. the most important thing tonight is to get back to the point where you believe the word of God, for He that is with us is greater than they that be against us. I want you to get a vision of the liquor forces so badly smashed that they'll never rise again—and we can do it." The reason advanced for the "skirmish lost" was that some thought the line of the forces for good could not hold, and the idea spread.

"When prohibition comes again, it's coming to stay. Our eyes have been opened. We'll keep a solid front which the enemy cannot pierce." The union and other members of the churches were then likened to the "Walls of Sparta"—rows of bayonets which cannot be passed by the enemy. "The right can win by the Divine bestowal of a passion in your soul. We need a passion to eliminate and eradicate every bar-room that exists today. I want the young people to face the world with everything God wants them to have. I don't want them to be weakened."

The second speaker, Mrs. Harper, told that "For 50 years courageous, Christian women have been working in this community for its welfare and to protect its youth, for the joy of doing a task for the Master. For 50 years there has been here an organization that worked for all that is inspiring, clean, right and just; and fought everything that is evil, and that threatened the peace of the community. You cannot measure in dollars and cents the good that has been done—but it is shown in the lives of the people of the community. You can't have 40 or 50 women in the community without having their influence, good or bad, felt, and the W. C. T. U. influence is always good. I can't see how some women can close their eyes to conditions as they are today. But let us of the W. C. T. U. resolve to do our best to help the young people grow stronger and to live better."

Vocal numbers included "My Task" sung by a quartet composed of Mrs. Charles I. Bowen, Mrs. Russell A. Johnson, Mrs. John Johnson, and Mrs. Earl McKuen; and a duet, "The Glow-worm" by Mrs. John Weik and Miss Laura Ellis. The accompanist for the former group was Mrs. Marburg D. Weagley; and for the duet, Miss Marie Watson. A piano selection, "Romance" (Sibelius), was played by Mrs. Weagley also.

A "Review of the Years" as presented by one of the charter members, Miss Hughes, pictured some of the most active workers of the union in years gone by. Participants were members of the union. As the activities of each were recounted by the reader, the curtain was drawn back, revealing the individuals impersonated. Mrs. Cynthia Holcomb, county president many years ago, and organizer of the Bristol branch, was impersonated by Mrs. Mary Hillborn; Mrs. Joshua Peirce, by Miss Mary Rogers; Mrs. Mary Groom, Mrs. Doron Green; Miss Gertrude Pope, Miss Ella Warner, the first treasurer, Miss Mary Haines; Miss Catherine Cadden, president from 1900 to 1908, Mrs. Maurice Watson; Miss Martha Parry Swain, Mrs. Ada B. Sands. Several other active members in the past were mentioned by Miss Hughes. The presidents who have served Bristol union were mentioned, these including: Mrs. Joshua Peirce, Mrs. Evan J. Groom, Mrs. Kate Milnor, Miss Catherine Cadden, Miss Martha C. Hughes; and Mrs. Harry H. Headley, the present incumbent. Others who are serving in official capacity at present are: first vice-president, Mrs. George Ardrey; second vice-president, Miss Gertrude Pope; recording secretary, Mrs. John Hendricks; treasurer, Miss Jane Rogers; corresponding secretary, Miss Marie Watson.

I. O. O. F. HEARS HISTORY OF WARRINGTON LODGE

Monthly Session is Held at Jamison by Lodges of Eastern District

A PLEASING PROGRAM

JAMISON, Oct. 30.—Lodges from various sections of Eastern Bucks County were represented at the monthly meeting, Monday night, of I. O. O. F. lodges of the Eastern District of Bucks County. Warrington Lodge was the host group, and the presiding officer was Harry Seltzer, a member of Neshamony Lodge, 422, Hulmeville, who is the district president.

Features of the evening were the presentation of a history of the Warrington Lodge by Claude Palmer, historian of the local group; and musical selections by two bands of musicians, one journeying here from Hulmeville under leadership of Charles Afflerbach, Sr., a member of Neshamony Lodge.

The history of Warrington Lodge given by Mr. Palmer follows:

Mr. President, Officers and Brothers: At a recent meeting of the district, the question arose of forming a constructive program for the coming year. I suggested that each lodge give a brief history of its existence from the time it was founded up to the present as one feature. As most of the lodges are nearing the century mark, and perhaps some are older, it might be well for us to occasionally remember that Odd-Fellowship is not just a passing whim, but is a grand institution founded on the solid rock—Friendship, Love, and Truth; that it does, and will withstand the ravages of time.

The suggestion was adopted, and incidentally I later discovered it was up to me to dig up old Warrington. So here goes.

The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania granted a charter to Warrington Lodge, No. 447, to be located at Newville, Bucks County, on July 18, 1851. Newville, now known as Warrington, is located about three miles west of here. In those days of slow transportation it evidently required considerable time before Warrington Lodge could be formally opened. It was November 26, 1851, when D. D. G. M. Downing appeared for the purpose of opening Warrington Lodge. According to the first minutes, the D. D. G. M. was assisted by Brothers from Loller Lodge, Hatboro; Tamany Lodge, 257; Doylestown Lodge, 94; Bristol, 87.

John Cozema was elected first N. G.; Josiah Markley, V. G.; T. Smith Radcliffe, secretary; and Jacob Markley, treasurer. They resolved to adopt the by-laws of Tamany Lodge, No. 257, until they could get their's drafted.

In the period from 1851-1860, they took in 80 some members. There was considerable activity almost every meeting. There was some degree work. In those days there were five degrees. Brothers were paid benefits according to the number of degrees they had received. Fifth degree Brothers received $3.50 per week when sick. The dues were 6½ cents a week. Officers of the lodge were promptly fined if they didn't attend, unless they had a good excuse. In glancing over the old minutes it is noticeable that the conduct of Brothers was watched in their every day life. If a Brother's conduct was unbecoming an Odd Fellow, charges were promptly proffered against him, and he had to apologize, or he was liable to suspension or fine. There was oftentimes a lot of competition for the offices of the lodge, and sometimes caused a good bit of dissension among the members.

In the period, 1860-1867, which were war times, the lodge fell back, and took in no new members for seven years, and most of the old ones were suspended. The meetings were sometimes several weeks apart and judging from the minutes Warrington Lodge barely escaped "going the voyage." However, after this period of inactivity, Warrington boomed again. A lot of the old members were re-in-

REPUBLICANS EXPECTED TO TURN OUT ENMASS TONIGHT FOR OLD-FASHIONED RALLY TO BE STAGED AT GRAND THEATRE

ASKS REPUDIATION OF ROOSEVELT AND EARLE

"Stop This Mad Spending," Urges Speaker at Republican Rally

CORNWELLS GATHERING

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Oct. 30 — In a stirring plea before a large gathering of voters in St. Charles' Hall, last night, Herbert Horan, former assistant city solicitor of Philadelphia, asked the citizens to go to the polls next Tuesday and repudiate the Democratic Administration in all its branches. "Stop this mad spending, get rid of T. V. A. so that utilities can expand, kill A. A. A. and reduce our food cost."

Mr. Horan also stated that if the voters unseat Judge Jesse E. Cunningham from the bench of the Superior Court, they will commit one of the worst political crimes ever. His Democratic opponent, an inexperienced, young lawyer, hand-picked by the Guffy-Earle crowd, would be the greatest misfit ever to sit in that court."

Edward Biester, assistant district attorney of Bucks county, told the audience that "The Roosevelt mortgage has plunged Bucks County into a debt of $75,000,000, and that all the property will be taxed accordingly."

"For two and a half centuries the bonded indebtedness of Bucks County has been only $125,000, but under the crazy spending of the Roosevelt administration in two and a half years the Democrats have laid upon our county a public debt two hundred times as great as it has been in two and a half centuries."

"We also object to the Philadelphia Democratic gang bringing hundreds of workers into our county to fix roads that don't need fixing. We object to the appropriation of large sums of money being spent for such projects. All this will end," continued Mr. Biester, "when the people refuse to be bought and go to the polls to vote American, which in this day and age is equivalent to saying 'Vote Republican'."

J. Leslie Kilcoyne, prominent Bristol attorney, also urged the voters to vote a straight Republican ticket and end all the alphabetical palaver. He said that the only good the T. V. A., A. A. A. and N. R. A. ever did that he could see was to teach the faithful their A-B-C's. Mr. Kilcoyne also introduced the local Republican candidates and asked the voters to elect them next Tuesday.

At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served by the Bensalem Ladies' Auxiliary.

Howard I. James Will Address The Gathering From Borough Angle

THATCHER TO SPEAK

Carrol L. Beedy, Former Congressman From Maine, Also Listed

Republicans are expected to turn out enmasse tonight for the old-fashioned rally which is to be staged in the Grand Theatre beginning at eight o'clock. Well-known speakers are to discuss the political issues of today and judging by the tremendous amount of interest which is being manifested in the campaign, it is expected that there will be a capacity crowd in attendance.

Ample parking space for automobiles is provided at the rear of the theatre, where a police officer will be on duty to watch them.

The meeting is not to be confined to the Republicans of Bristol but Republicans from the other districts in lower Bucks County have been invited to attend the meeting and reports received today are to the effect that numerous delegations are coming from the territory adjacent to Bristol.

Three speakers have been announced and all of them are well qualified to address such a gathering. They will talk upon the political issues from three points of view.

Howard I. James, Esq., Bristol, one of the best known attorneys in this area, is going to speak from the borough angle. Mr. James will dwell upon conditions in Bristol and how the election next Tuesday will affect this borough and its residents.

The issues of the campaign from the Bucks County point of view will be discussed by Mark Thatcher, Perkasie, Mr. Thatcher is solicitor for Bucks County and is thoroughly conversant with the effect this election will have upon Bucks County and its affairs.

The last speaker is to be Carrol L. Beedy, Republican, former congressman from Maine. Mr. Beedy as a speaker has a national reputation and comes to Bristol thoroughly competent to speak upon the issues of the campaign from the national angle.

Mr. Beedy was a speaker at a meeting of the Bucks County Republican Committee recently held in Doylestown. Upon that occasion he delivered an address which thrilled his auditors. He explained the workings of the New Deal and told of their effect upon every individual living in the United States. His clarity of expression and his illustrations drove home the facts with such force that they were indelibly impressed upon his audience. Mr. Beedy is a speaker eagerly sought after by much larger communities than Bristol.

The American Legion Cadets will parade through the streets of Bristol previous to the meeting. They will leave the Legion Home at 6.30.

A CORRECTION

It was inadvertently and incorrectly stated in the biography of John H. Wichser, Republican candidate for council from the second ward, published in the Courier yesterday, that Mr. Wichser's father, Casper Wichser, was deceased. Mr. Casper Wichser is a resident of Plainfield, N. J., and is now a guest of his son, John, here.

JUNIOR GUILD BENEFITS

The Junior Needlework Guild held a card party Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Newman, 329 Hayes street. Five tables of pinochle players were arranged. The high scorers were Mrs. William Borchers, 764; Miss Elsie Newman, 721; Rudolph Raby, 712; H. Force, 712; Edward Newman, 710; Evelyn Newman, 693.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL OF THE PRESS-- DESPOTISM'S MOST SINISTER AIM

(New York American, October 28, 1935)

The rawness of the Raw Deal is nowhere better shown than in its smothering of all inquiry and investigation directed at itself.

General Hugh Johnson was a pillar and mainstay of the New Deal for a long time, but it became too raw for him.

A "hopeless tangle," "the tragedy of the present mess," "confusion of counsel," "incompetence of administration," "terrible timing," "bad staff work," "lack of co-ordination," "divided and contradictory purposes"—this is the way it looks now to the former chief of the NRA.

But when less outspoken, but equally earnest men in Congress, reluctant to denounce and only desirous of ascertaining the causes of a failure now manifest to the world, sought to investigate the causes of its failure, they were balked by the Administration's political control of the Senate and House committees.

DISILLUSIONMENT

Just a year ago, perhaps even more recently, that new car for the purchase of which the old relic of 1930 was the down payment, represented the last word in the motorcar makers' art. It was the latest thing and looked like the last and best. By comparison with everything that had gone before it, it was motorcar perfection.

The lines of the streamline body, the color combination, the performance, the equipment, the endurance qualities of that marvel of motor-dom convinced the owner that his automobile wants were satisfied for at least five years, for the industry could not possibly improve upon it within that time and nothing could antiquate it for at least a decade.

But November comes and the automobile industry decides to hold a show. That meant producing something to show. Presto change! Hundreds of 1936 models that put the proudest product of 1935 in a class with the short skirts.

The satisfied owner of a 1935 model will come out of the automobile show the dissatisfied prospect for a 1936 model, convinced that if he can make a good trade his car needs for another five years will be fulfilled. And so arrival at the saturation point in automobile ownership is postponed another year.

WHEN CHILDREN FAIL

Every killer, every outlaw, every thief a few years ago was a school-boy. If every step in his career were revealed, a lot of parents and teachers and other adults would have cause to blush with shame.

In Milwaukee at a recent conference of public health workers, Dr. Frederick L. Parry, psychiatrist of the New York state education department, said to watch the child that's failing. "No child wants failure," said he. "Failure means only one thing: That someone has blundered; someone has failed to show the child off to advantage of his own level of ability to succeed."

The criminal's attitude is, "I don't care." The child, driven by too severe exactions into the "don't care" frame of mind, may be headed toward delinquency. Juvenile delinquents recruit the ranks of criminals.

A child's repeated "failure" means only one thing: That adults who set up impossible standards for him blundered. Such blunders are infinitely costly.

THE ROOSEVELT MORTGAGE

Do you know that in 2½ years the Roosevelt Administration has put a public dept on Bucks County 200 times Bucks County's own bonded debt after 2½ centuries as a county?

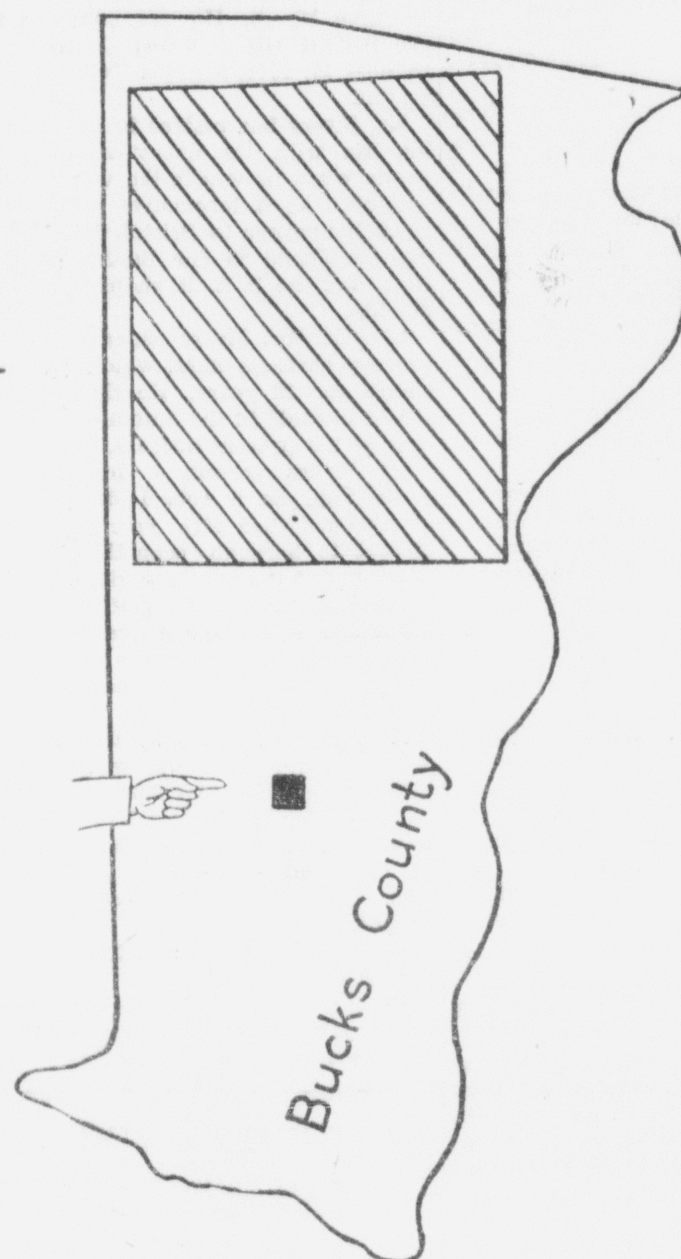

Do you know that this Federal Mortgage on Bucks County amounts to one-third of the County's assessed valuation?

Pennsylvania pays One-Tenth of all Federal Taxes and 1% of the People of Pennsylvania live in Bucks County.

The Roosevelt Mortgage on Bucks County

As Compared With

Bucks County's Own Bonded Indebtedness

To Aug. 31, 1935, the Roosevelt Administration had put this country in hock to the amount of $25,000,000,000 (Twenty-five Thousand Millions)

The portion that Pennsylvania will have to pay is $2,500,000,000 (Twenty-five Hundred Millions)

Bucks County's load, with 1% of the population of Pennsylvania, is $25,000,000

The assessed valuation of Bucks County is $75,000,000

After 250 years as a County, the bonded indebtedness of Bucks County, created by the people of Bucks County, is only $125,000

In Other Words, the Wanton Waste and Extravagance of the Roosevelt Administration, in 2½ Years, Has Loaded Upon the People of Bucks County a Public Debt 200 Times as Great as Bucks County Itself Had at the End of 2½ Centuries.

The assessed valuation of Bucks County is approximately $75,000,000

Bucks County's Share of the Roosevelt Mortgage, Created During the Last 2½ Years, is One-Third of the Assessed Valuation of the County.

THAT IS NEW DEAL FINANCING!

Will you be justified in voting for the candidates on the Democratic county ticket pledged to the policies of the Roosevelt and Earle Administrations, and by such vote place the political prestige of Bucks County behind such destructive financial policies?

Do you approve of fiscal programs which will put further back-breaking burdens of taxation, not only upon yourself, but upon the generations to come?

IF NOT, VOTE THE REPUBLICAN TICKET

CHAPTER XXX

Stuart was walking over the Hollywood hills one windy day in February. Great grey clouds scudded across the sky out of the black North. They twisted and writhed in a tumbled mass over the opening of the ravine, blotting out the comforting glimpses of the town. His eyes were fixed somberly on the great blackened patch ahead where a disastrous brush fire had roared its destructive way in the autumn.

"Am I to be like that seared ground forever?" he thought. Never to feel the uprush of Spring inside me again!"

A meadow lark trilled with Pollyannish perseverance. "Oh, shut up!" Stuart muttered irritably and turned towards home. He stopped at the mailbox at the foot of the hill. He had not been interested enough to look in it for three days. A solitary bill was forthcoming. It was from the artists' supply firm. Stuart tore it open on the way up to the house, dreading to find out how much he owed. There was a note appended to the bill. Very peremptory. "We regret that we shall have to close your account if this bill, long overdue, is not paid at once."

And the bill was for close to two hundred dollars. Stuart let himself into his studio and looked blankly around the cold, cheerless place, as if asking where the money was to come from. No use sending any more soap "ideas." The advertising business was shot to bits along with almost every other enterprise since the crash of the stock market.

With a sigh Stuart started to pack up the canvases smeared with that two hundred dollars' worth of paint. He did not believe in any one of them. Horrible daubs. Hesitating, immature. But his only stock in trade. Perhaps Abe Foreman could get a few dollars for them from some benighted fool.

But Foreman, the art dealer, was having his own troubles, being in a "luxury" business. Abe was nervous and irritable and in no mood to be kind. Nothing good had come from that hill-top studio for a long time. He eyed his tall, thin, reluctant visitor without warmth.

"I hope you can sell some of this truck, Abe," Stuart began haltingly.

"Let's see it," non-committally from Foreman. Stuart unpacked and set up his canvases in the midst of a depressing silence that continued ominously as the expert scrutinized each painting in turn.

At the end Abe turned away and lit a cigar. "Take 'em away," he said tersely. "I can't sell 'em."

"I hoped perhaps there'd be some."

"Some boob, eh? Well, I don't play my customers a dirty trick, see? Some of 'em wouldn't know any better than to buy these—on your former reputation. But it ain't fair—to them or to you—to let that truck go out as Pennington's."

Stuart was silent, looking at the floor. Foreman began storming up and down, smoking furiously, sometimes sending a baleful glance at the canvases.

"What's got into you, Pennington? You're afraid. You used to handle color with freedom, and magnificent effect. Now look at these things. What's the matter? Ain't you got any more gumption?"

Stuart did not answer. Presently Abe Foreman picked up a study of a very young girl among almond blossoms.

"Look at this! Blah, blah, blah! Oh, I know you're a mighty good draughtsman. This drawing is O. K. But it don't mean a thing. Do you happen to remember a thing you did called 'Death'? Huh! All this stuff smells of death—but there ain't a thing here that's got the feel of that little old canvas!"

Stuart stirred. "Can you sell anything at all these days, Abe? Could you sell that 'Death' if you had it now?"

"Sure I could! People have still got money—for permanent stuff like that. But this junk looks like some of the chromatics of that bunch of posers up the Valley. I heard you'd been running with 'em—"

"Well, I didn't have anything inside, Abe. Vacant. Gone blooie. So I began to look outside—to see what the other fellows were doing. I got so much from such contacts in Paris. . . . I've been trying for restraint, subtlety—"

"Yah! Yah! And lost all your sparkle! 'Tams' again. I used to be glad you were one painter who'd walk alone and give us something original. Subtlety—blah! What more subtlety do you want than in that 'Sun Shining Through Clouds'? Go up to Lucien Morrow's and study it a while—it's like an Old Master. Maybe you can learn something. You make me sick!"

"Well," said Stuart, at last, "that's all very well—but I need some money."

"You—and who else?" sneered Abe Foreman. "Well, I won't ruin your reputation by trying to sell that tripe. If you need money, go dig sewers. But listen, boy, the minute you paint something in the old manner—you let me know."

So Stuart packed his canvases again and lugged them home. He might have tried some other dealers but, with Abe's scorn ringing in his ears, he didn't have the nerve.

He called up the artist supplies' place on the telephone and happened to get Hermann, the old German who knew his dyes so well.

"Oh, Hermann. This is Mr. Pennington. I reckon I want the credit department—"

"Yes, Mr. Pennington." The old voice hesitated. "I'm sorry about—that notice that was sent to you—"

"That was all right. The bill is long overdue. But I don't know what to use for money so I can get more paint!"

"Mr. Pennington—excuse me—but did you ever think of selling your clothes?"

"My clothes?"

"I mean—not the tweeds you wear now. But you used to come in here wearing beautiful suits after you got back from the Orient. I used to be a tailor in the Old Country so I noticed. I thought maybe if you still had them—"

"Oh, yes, I have them somewhere." Stuart was remembering the Eddie Meyer clothes that had been locked away in a trunk since the day he moved out of Sharlene's house.

"Good! There are lots of actors and such in Hollywood that would be glad to buy those clothes. Solomon Sobel specializes in them. Can't I send him up to you, Mr. Pennington?"

"Why," said Stuart, laughing a little in embarrassment, "that's mighty kind. If you think—well, yes, we could try it!"

"All right, Mr. Pennington. And I want to remind you I have some of that special alizarine crimson you used to use."

"Thanks. I'll be in soon."

Stuart dragged the wardrobe trunk into the studio from where it had stood for months in the second bedroom, and finally found the keys in a tumbled bureau drawer cheek by jowl with some collars and a few discarded tubes of paint. He rather shrunk from opening the trunk. He had been successful in walling off all sick memories of those last turbulent months. He had walled off Sharlene herself so successfully that he rarely thought of her any more.

Drawing out the suits on the rods, he satisfied himself that the suits had not ravaged them. When he shook out the handsome dinner clothes he had worn on his "Last Appearance" as "Prince Consort," his hand encountered something soft as flower petals in a pocket.

Stuart drew it out. It was the scarf the Maharana of Udairpur had given Sharlene on that magic journey to the Wind Palace at Jal Samand. It was drawn through her little diamond-studded wedding ring and clung to his hands like a cob-web, with a gossamer yet persistent caress.

"So delicate," she had said, "that one may pass a whole scarf through a finger ring."

She had left him the scarf—and the ring, mute reminders of the glorious moments that were his alone. She must have felt that even she had no right to share that memory with him any longer. . . . So like Sharlene!

Suddenly Stuart buried his face in the scarf. The fragrance of Sharlene still pervaded it. He stood there in the big untidy room, shaken like the silver birch outside his window in the February wind. The diamonds in the ring cut into his mouth as he crushed it against his face.

When he lifted his eyes at last, there was a new look dawning in their sorrowful depths. Something just being born—not yet seeing the light—but coming—coming—out of agony into light. . . .

An amazing equipage was drawing to a stop at the foot of the path to Stuart's house. Cream colored with black velvet upholstery, small and ornate. It was less like an automobile than like Cinderella's pumpkin coach. The chauffeur in black uniform and puttees (too bad it couldn't have been small clothes!) ran around to open the door.

Julie stepped out of her coach, drawing sables about her small person, and regarded the steep incline with annoyance.

"I don't know how I'll ever make it in this wind," she observed petulantly.

The chauffeur measured her petite form with his eye. "I could carry you if it was on the level, but—"

He cast a hopeless glance up the hill.

"Oh, I guess I can walk it. It has been done!"

When she walked in on him, Stuart was striding up and down the room holding an exquisite East Indian veil in his hand. Julie noticed it instantly, her attention pouncing as always on any sort of beautiful wearing apparel. He turned dazzled eyes to her, struggling up from dreams, not even recognizing the intruder at first.

"Hello, darling! Where'd you get that gorgeous—?" Her eyes caught the open trunk and the clothes. "What's up, Stuart? You're not going away?"

"What? Oh, no. I'm broke and I'm selling this truck to raise some money."

"Don't do it!" Julie advanced into the room and dropped her furs on a chair. "I'll buy that scarf, Stuart, and give you more for it than you could get for all the clothes—"

She reached out a determined hand for the veil, but he deftly whipped it away from her and tucked it into the inner pocket of his coat.

"It's not for sale," he said evenly. "But—I could use it in my next picture."

"So can I," he said with some strange inward claim.

"What do you mean?" Julie demanded sulkily.

"For a prop, you know."

"Oh! Like that Spanish comb you brought home one time. . . . You never got to paint me as a Mexican girl, did you, Stuart?"

"No." He spoke absently, almost abruptly. An idea was stirring, stirring, demanding to be born.

Julie curled up on the couch. "Set fire to that trash in the fireplace, darling. This room is awfully cold."

He did so. She kicked off her little pumps and held her stockings feet toward the blaze, watching Stuart as he strode up and down the room. There began to be a pervading excitement about him. His blue eyes sparkled when he turned in his restless pacing to face the fire. His hair was still tumbled from the wind. His mouth—he had cut it. Julie longed to kiss it. At first she watched him lazily while she basked like a kitten, reveling in the sight of him. Then she began to catch his excitement, only hers was for a very different reason.

"I had to see you, Stuart," she said throatily. "I've been dying to see you!"

He threw her an absent smile and continued to pace. She got up quickly and ran to seize his arm padding along with him in silk shod feet, up and down, up and down the room. He was not aware of her, but she did not know it for a while.

"Know why I came, darling? 'Cause I love you, that's why! And I get hungry for you. Hungry, Stuart—"

"To the hungry heart—" he murmured under his breath.

She could feel the tenseness of his arm under her hand.

"Of course, you were right, darling, not to marry me then and live my life. But look, Stuart, why can't we re-own—yes, reconsider it."

She ran with little kitten-paddling steps to keep up with his strides. She did not look at him, but she knew that he was stirred.

"Of course, I've got lots of men friends—it isn't that." She paused for that to sink in—to get him jealous. He hurried his steps and she was jubilant.

"But you see," she went on caressingly, "I miss you, darling, and I want you—"

Stuart interrupted her suddenly with some indeterminate word like "wait." He went over to his easel, threw aside a half-finished picture and grabbed up a new canvas. His eyes were blazing now and his lips a taut line.

Julie, fighting down sudden anger, recognized that look. He had an idea for a picture, "for crying out loud!" He hadn't even listened while she—she had been offering him—everything! What a fool!

She stamped her foot but it made a ludicrous soft "plop" on the bare floor and it hurt her.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL OF THE PRESS--

DESPOTISM'S MOST SINISTER AIM

resolution authorizing the judiciary committee of the Senate to investigate the NRA—the resolution was pigeon-holed!

When Senator Byrd, Democrat, of Virginia, offered a resolution to obtain the Attorney General's opinion on the constitutionality of the Guffey Bill—it was killed by Raw Deal Democrats!

When Representative Mead proposed an investigation of the air transport scandal under Jim Farley's regime—it was likewise killed!

When Representative Amlie, of Wisconsin, sought to investigate the AAA—his resolution was trampled under foot by the Raw Deal goosesteppers in the House!

Under these circumstances, it is probably idle to demand an investigation of one of the most sinister moves the new despotism has yet made—the reach for control of the press by the use of Federal money.

Not that the press can be bribed or muzzled through the subornation of its publishers or editors.

The press of America is a self-respecting press! But apparently the ownership of hitherto independent newspapers can be acquired through credit and financial manipulations by the Administration.

We refer to the charge made by Senator Hastings, of Delaware, with relation to the purchase of control of two Nashville papers in some sort of deal between the American National Bank of Nashville and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

This bank, of which we have heard before, has as its president Paul Davis, brother of Norman Davis, who fills the non-descript role of Roving Ambassador for the New Deal.

The details of this transaction in Tennessee have not been given to the public.

But it looks as if the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, having taken over from the Canal Bank and Trust Company of New Orleans a large block of bonds of the Tennessee newspaper, was bestowing the control of the newspaper in a way best adapted to the future service of the Raw Deal.

As Senator Hastings says: "On the face of the Davis transaction, it appears to be a plain attempt at perversion of the principle of freedom of the press. "It is a vicious policy for the Government to become entangled in newspapers. NOTHING COULD BE MORE RUINOUS TO FREEDOM OF THE PRESS THAN GOVERNMENT DEALING IN NEWSPAPERS!"

And he is right.

The Administration, doubtless smarting under the fact that a majority of the newspapers of America are now its critics, is apparently seeking to control newspapers by the use of Government credit and money, even to the point of going into the business of buying newspapers and running them in its own support.

The well justified demand for a sweeping investigation of this whole transaction will probably—for the moment—go the way of all other demands for the investigation of the Raw Deal.

The door to the truth—will be barred to truth. But this condition cannot exist forever. Truth crushed to earth has a buoyant way of rising again, to confound its enemies.

And a better day—for the truth—will sometime come, and we think soon.

As General Johnson says, warning the Administration to mend its ways—and his words might well be taken to heart by the President — "THINK FAST, CAPTAIN — THINK FAST!"

The Roosevelt Administration increasing the number of Federal employees by more than 95,000, at a payroll increase of upwards of 100 MILLION DOLLARS.

The slaughtering of millions of pigs and cotton plowed under when millions of our people have to depend upon the Government for food and clothing.

The employment of thousands of persons to enforce the Potato Control Law, which provides fine and imprisonment for anyone who raises more than five bushels without a Federal permit.

Governor Earle loading the people of Pennsylvania with 125 MILLION DOLLARS IN NEW TAXES, which would have been $203,000,000, except for the Republican State Senate.

Governor Earle's continued attempts to scrap the present Constitution of Pennsylvania, and thereby obtain unlimited authority to borrow money upon the public credit, raise taxes, destroy Home Rule and concentrate all powers in the Governor.

The wanton waste, the sinful extravagance, the galling injustice of the Federal-State Democratic political intrigue, under which we have seen hundreds of the Kelly Army of unemployed Philadelphians dumped into Bucks County, to tear up and then rebuild our roads, while 8,000 Bucks Countians are compelled to remain on relief, unable to get work.

Scout Commissioners Discuss Unit Problems

take over supervisory leadership as District and Neighborhood Commissioners to render as effective Scouting Service through one Scout Executive, as was done, in 1930 and 1931 with two additional assistant scout executives. The Council has been divided into six districts for this purpose. Bristol, Edgely, Tullytown, Croydon, Newportville, Edgington, Cornwells and Andalusia comprise the Lower Bucks District or what is generally known as District No. 1.

"We are delighted with the great increase of subscriptions during the past week," said Finance Chairman Edmund H. Lovett, Yardley, on receiving the report on the progress of the Bucks County Scouting Campaign. "Solicitors throughout the Council have raised one-third of our $10,000 objective for 1935 to be distributed so that $2500 can be used to take care of the camp buildings at Buccoo. The balance of $7500 will be devoted to maintain program, and necessary services to provide Scouting for the present 1101 Cubs, Scouts and Seascouts and to enroll 250 new boys. This increase of 250 boys will be quite a problem to accomplish but can be attained with such sufficient funds to complete the necessary organization, and to provide for the correspondence, training, a. l. conferences."

All the solicitors are endeavoring to do better than the increase over last week during the coming week. The $3303.71 that has been raised is just the start, and the finish will show the interest Bucks County has in its boys. The time to give is now, and everyone is urged to send their contributions to their local Sectional Chairman if through some error they have not been seen.

Bristol is taking the lead in the lower end of the county under the energetic leadership of Paul V. Foster, and the loyal hard work of his solicitors. Communities equaling or exceeding the Council-wide status of 33% raise include: Bristol (Paul V. Foster), West Bucks District (C. Wilson Roberts), Doylestown (W. Lawrence Mason), Lahaska & Wycombe (Amos J. Kirk), Perkaskie (Thomas R. Lewis), Sellersville (A. R. Hendricks), Quakertown (Asher Biehn), Riegelsville (Arthur W. Osborne), and Milford (Lewis Fetherolf).

I. O. O. F. Hears History Of Warrington Lodge

stated, and also started to gain new members. In 1869 the dues were raised from 6 1/2 cents to 10 cents per week; also sick benefits were increased so a fifth degree Odd Fellow received $4.00 per week. Any member not attaining fifth degree received $3.50 per week. Funeral benefits of $40 for a Brother, or $35 for his wife.

In the period of the next 20 years there was steady growth in membership, and finances. In reading over the minutes I see that at almost every meeting there was balloting or conferring of degrees. Also I noticed that nearly every meeting night, there would be a communication from some lodge in the state asking for financial assistance of from one to five dollars, which Warrington usually complied with. In the summer time the Lodge ran excursions to various places on the train. The member sold the tickets and any profits went to the sinking fund. In those horse and buggy days an excursion by train was a novelty, no doubt enjoyed by all who went.

Warrington Lodge had its share of petty squabbles as all worth-while institutions do have. In 1887 it was proposed to move the lodge to Jamison as it was more centrally located and the hall was in better condition. It was voted down, however. Five years later, 1892, they agreed to move to Jamison. When they did move to Jamison there were 80 members and about $3500 invested. In looking over the annual report of 1892 one interesting feature was per capita tax of .08 per member, or $6.40 for 80 members. After moving to Jamison, the Lodge grew at a steady pace; gains almost always exceeded losses. In 1900, John W. Gray, a Trustee, and very active worker of this lodge, passed away, bequeathing to the lodge $5,000, to be used as a building fund for the purpose of Warrington Lodge, building itself a permanent home. In 1919 the lodge purchased the hotel property for the purpose of building, but the high cost of construction and the uncertainty of the times have delayed it so far.

For a number of years this lodge paid all sick Brothers $5 per week for as long as they were sick, which was quite a drain on the treasury. A number of Brothers have drawn two and three thousand dollars sick benefits out of the lodge. As the lodge couldn't continue to pay out more than they were taking in, our By-Laws were changed and now a Brother may draw $5 per week until he has drawn $1000 then it is reduced to $2.50 per week as long as he is a member.

Warrington Lodge had 18 Brothers to serve in the World War, for which a bronze tablet was placed in the Lodge room.

The zenith of Warrington membership was reached in the early twenties when the total membership reached 243. Since then, the depression, etc., have caused us to fall back to 160, but if history tells us anything we'll come back.

This lodge met on Saturday nights until 1926 when the meeting night was changed to Monday. I also notice that the first meeting of the Eastern District was held in Warrington Lodge, June 26, 1926, so these meetings are soon going to be 10 years old.

In the 84 years of existence, Warrington lodge has taken in about 600 members with a wide variety of occu-

HOLLYWOOD—If all the reports coming up from Laguna are true, Eric Linden's house will be the screwiest owned by any film celeb.

There isn't any front door. You drive into the garage and mount a spiral stairway of heavy glass to the living room on the second floor. This room is paneled in redwood, which, at the touch of a button, slides back, revealing a wide expanse of patio overlooking the ocean. The dining room is circular and its walls are made of transparent glass bricks. The bathroom window is an aquarium to be filled with tropical fish. But wait till you hear about the kitchen. It is roofed entirely with glass and has a round electric stove which can be rolled to any one of a number of connections. The floors of all the rooms are rubber composition tiles. There'll not be a rug in the house.

A note for the curious. The locket Irving Thalberg carries was given to him by Norma Shearer. It contains strands of the two children's hair and a lock of Norma's.

The home movie experts in Hollywood will be green with envy when they hear of this. Henry Fonda is photographing "The Trail of Lonesome Pine" on 16 millimeter film, and in color. With Walter Wanger's permission, he works his camera when the company is rehearsing. In scenes that he appears, Dick Talmadge, the assistant director, subs as cameraman. Fonda's film is coming down each day with the company rushes and is being developed along with the main negative. By the time the picture is completed and cut, it will have cost him $1,500.

The guest list at what exclusive invitational preview recently contained a name that has sent Hollywood into hysterics? It got printed, too.

You Asked Me and I'm Telling You! Hal Davis, Berkeley: Boris Karloff has been Lon Chaney's successor in weird make-ups, but little Georgie Stone will be a close second in "Anthony Adverse". He plays the stunner stage coach driver, Sanchez, whom the author likens to a cat.

The Westmores took eight hours to put the makeup on George for the first time. Even with practice, will probably run about four hours. Mervyn Leroy says it is the greatest feat of changing an actor's appearance he has ever seen.

If it will comfort the Arkansas men who sent Dick Powell the 195 pound watermelon, the damage it suffered in shipping didn't hurt the seeds and Dick has planted several hundred of them in a patch of ground adjoining his Toluca home. About next fall, he hopes to give Hollywood's first watermelon festival, asking all his friends to come in for the feed.

Hard to believe that two years ago Fred MacMurray was unable to get an extra job in Hollywood and that, only one year ago, he started "The Gilded Lily" with Claudette Colbert. Before that, he had played only one small part, with May Robson in "Grand Old Girl". But since he clicked with the fans, he has worked in five pictures and could keep busy even if he were quintuplets. In the year, he has played opposite Katharine Hepburn, Carole Lombard, Colbert again and now is on loan to Wanger.

HOLLYWOOD TICKER-TAPE—Max Baer is up to his night club clowning again. The other night he helped Guy Rennie put on a show at the Club Kalua in San Francisco. . . . And wasn't that Marshall Duffield with Mae Clarke in the same spot?

More than 200 invitations were sent out to the Halloween party of Betty Grable's for Jackie Coogan at the Hotel Knickerbocker. His twenty-first birthday is Nov. 2. . . . Barrett Kiesel, of the M. G. M. press department, is still on the critical list after an emergency operation for appendicitis, but doctors are hopeful now. . . . Personal to Frances Farmer: will you please get in touch with Paramount. They want to make tests of you. . . . Virginia Reid, the lass who left Hollywood to train for opera will be seen in Louis Schurr's production of "Chopin".

DID YOU KNOW?—That Gustav von Seyffertitz, the character actor, once directed Mary Pickford and Maude Adams?

BOXING BOUTS TO OPEN TONIGHT IN THE NEW ARENA AT CROYDON

Arrangements have been completed, everything is in readiness for the opening of Croydon's brand new boxing arena tonight, at the corner of State Road and Cedar avenue, under the direction of the Bucks County Rescue Squad, an organization that is doing a great work in Red Cross and hospitalization in this community.

The bouts are scheduled to start at 8.30 with ten matches between local boys and out of town opponents. According to Sammy Moffo, matchmaker, a number of the locals will surprise the fans with their boxing and hitting skill.

Nickey Bullets who weighs 160 lbs. and hails from along the mill pond has created quite a stir in his work-outs, this lad is said to be the heaviest puncher ever developed in this section in some time. Another lad who has a great future in the squared circle, according to advance notices, is Joe Roe, 145, Fourth Ward favorite. He will be matched against a Philadelphia in one of the bouts.

The Myer brothers, Joe and Tom, a couple of rock 'em and sock 'em fighters from Croydon will also appear on the card as will Jimmy Masella, 147 lb. Third Ward battler who gave young Dundee such a tough battle this fall in one of the St. Ann's bouts.

Billy Moffo will have Joe Christy and Art Palmer a couple of Holmesburg football players here in great shape to tackle any opponent they are matched against. Also Al Paris, a St. Ann's favorite, and James Nocito, Croydon truck driver. Seat reservations can be made by phoning 9982 or at the box office.

PHILADELPHIA — (INS) — Zoo officials, astounded by the action of one of the garden's penguin flock in 'aying an egg, are hoping against hope that a chick will be hatched. Usually the birds need an iceberg or something like that for nesting activities, but this penguin just built a private nest in a clump of bushes. If hatched, the chick will be the first penguin ever born in captivity.

SPORT SHOTS by Maxwell Gordon

Seven knockouts in 10 fights . . . that requires action and plenty of it . . . well, that's exactly what the fans got Monday night at the second St. Ann's indoor boxing show . . . rip-slashing, smashing, nerve-tingling bouts . . . every one, but the main affair of the evening.

The feature bout was an exhibition between George Morrow, the 1935 135-pound Middle States champion, and Albert Pierce of the Wharton Club . . . both Philadelphiaans who tried very hard to make the fans think they really meant it . . . The management, who seem anxious to please the patrons and give them everything they can . . . would do well to keep these champions off their programs, because they don't try.

In one of the bouts a white lad was boxing with a colored boy and we noticed that in the white chap's corner was a colored handler, and in the colored youth's corner were two white men giving their fighter instructions on how to beat the white boy . . . so what.

Willie Hussie of the Chelton Club certainly made quick work of John Andrews, colored, of Wharton A. C., splashing a wicked right on the point of the colored boy's jaw in the first round for a knockout . . . Tony Puccio, St. Ann's "Bear Cat" didn't give Salvatore Manzo, of Philadelphia, a chance to get going . . . the "Bear Cat" smothered the clever Quaker City youngster before he got started, winning by a T-K-O in the second.

Among the many faces seen watching the action were Borough Treasurer William Lefferts, Chief Linford Jones, and the Messrs. Edward Wallace, Bob Weik, Thomas Profy, Charles Parker, Tony and Mrs. Platch, Auto Painter John Sugalski, George Herman and Alfred Tomesani.

The Elks Club had a large delegation also present, among whom were Fred Gould, Hugh Duman, Damon Jobson, Charles Viet, Owen Evans, "Bud" Pearson, Dayton Fegley, Chauncey Stoneback, Jr., and brother Harvey; also Tom Jones, John Roberts, Jr., Edward Gallacher, Clarence Wilson, Frank Jenks, and John Black.

Tony Iannotti and Dominick Nocito, Sixth Ward barbers, and Frank Murphy were another trio who seemed to enjoy themselves.

It's funny sometimes to hear the reaction of the fans on the termination of a bout . . . particularly if one of the boys suffers a knockout . . . One person will say, gee, he got clipped on the button with a right . . . that's the punch that finished him . . . His companion will say . . . No, he was only pushed, he quit, that right didn't hurt him . . . and so it goes until sometimes you think you must have been on Burlington Island instead of watching a fight . . . You don't know what it is all about.

CHIEF LITTLE WOLF OUT FOR KASHEY'S SCALP

TRENTON, Oct. 30.—Chief Little Wolf will go after his fourth straight victory at the Arena tonight when he grapples Abe Kashey in the feature event on Johnny Ipp's weekly mat card. This may be the hardest job the Indian has tackled since he returned east after a successful western campaign.

Kashey delights in the rough stuff. He is an expert with the forearm nudge. He has many other off-color tricks that he will bring into play to try to stop the burly Indian. In his three matches with Ed Meske, Kashey made his best showing when he broke away from the "Indian death-lock" that Meske clamped on him.

The "death-lock" is the invention of Little Wolf's forebears and first brought into general wrestling use here by the Indian less than a year ago. He claims that when he secures this hold on an opponent, it cannot be broken. Kashey is equally certain that he can twist out of the tortuous hold.

Kashey is out to prove that he is a better man than Wolf and that he really belongs right in the middle of the charmed circle of foremost contenders.

It will be as rough and exciting an encounter as was ever contested at the Stockton Street palestra of grunt and groan and a winner, whoever it might be, will not be returned without a gruelling struggle.

An excellent set of supporting bouts will precede the main go. George Koverly, a new menace of Arena fandom, will face stern opposition when he tangles with Irish Jack Donovan, handsome Bostonian. Al Mercier, a newcomer from Canada, will make his first appearance here against Tom Alley, Australian surf-board hold champion. Jack Hader, another newcomer from Kansas City will meet George Manich, of Belmar, N. J.

It seems to us with all the abuse being piled on this column, that maybe those who are helping to lay it on should glance at our maxim. These scribbles on sport are merely our opinion. Simply an individual's slants on sports.

This observer believes that officials over at St. Ann's were taking a little too much liberty at banishing that player from the game on Sunday. The player was thrown from the game because of supposed "unsportsmanlike conduct." It looked to us as if he was simply sticking up for his club's rights.

Tonight in the old skating rink in Croydon the Bucks County Rescue Squad is sponsoring the first of boxing matches to be held in this hall. They have a multitude of swell leather pushers down there and it might be a good idea to take a jaunt down to the ex-skating emporium and watch the boys in action.

We wonder if "Bill" Dougherty, coach at the local high school, would take a suggestion. We suggest that "Bill" tell his club to snatch a few touchdowns, when they meet a breather, before they start practicing some of the new plays. Over at Langhorne the other day "Doc" started on his fluke formation before his club had even counted. Seven points isn't such a large margin, "Bill." Better get a few points next week.

The Recreation club certainly is playing some stiff opposition in their Sabbath games on Leedom's. Their record is something to be proud of, too. Unbeaten, untied, and unscored upon. They are the only club in this vicinity holding such a mark.

What a spot Ken Strong, full-back of the New York Giants in the National Professional League, was in on Sunday. For two years Ken hadn't missed a point after touchdown. Last week he was called upon to use his highly educated toe. At the time his club was trailing the Chicago Cardinals, 11-13. He missed it, and that was the margin of victory. We've seen some days when the Giants would score, four, five, and even six touchdowns in one game, and Strong would convert each time. That was a tough one to lose, Ken.

The local St. Ann's aggregation seem to be playing scientific football, and Sunday's game was one of their smoothest exhibitions this season. Next week the Saints combat the Port Richmond club, better known as the Tulp S. C. This club is also undefeated, untied and unscored upon.

The club which travels up here on Sunday, that is, the Clover C. C., to meet the Rees, is another tough team. Lots of luck to the local boys next week.

There might be two famous comebacks this week. We'll give our vote to Langhorne. Still another of our contemporaries sees it as Gunning Season.

We would like to conclude that if any of our readers have any type of comment we would be only too glad to discuss it in our weekly column. Address us, Sport Scribbles, in care of the COURIER. Remember, if you can't take part in a sport, well, be one any way, and help us make our column a benefit to everyone.

A Princeton team with unsullied record faces its sternest test of the season when Navy invades Princeton with R. R. Pratt (right), star halfback. The Tiger forces will lean heavily on Garret Le Van (left), triple threat, to stem the Navy tide.
